Message from the President

By Chuck Cooley

Hi everyone, As I sit here writing this message, we are experiencing heavy rains that washed away our first snowfall of the year which was a doozy; definitely not good Corvette weather. I hope everyone survived the storm without incidence. The positive side of the weather was that it kept me inside to start organizing for my tax returns and catch up on some reading. January is generally slow for events but we did have a game night hosted by Byron Faber and coming up on the 28th is a progressive dinner hosted by the Shurts, Shipley's' and Cooley's'. If you haven't signed up but want to participate, please contact one of the hosts. There are however a number of events scheduled for February so checkout the event calendar.

February is the last month to submit nominations for new club officers....we currently have nominees for the President, Vice President and Treasurer Positions; however we need a nominee for secretary position. It's not a difficult job, so please consider the position and support the club. Also it's time to think about a recipient for the"

GM-Chevrolet Corvette Trivia:
 GM was looking for some way to advertise their Corvette Product in the 60's and 70's. Before flights NASA allows the Astronauts to drive around the space center in convertibles. When the local Chevrolet dealers heard about this tradition they were very happy to lease Astronauts Corvette convertibles for $1.00 dollar a year.

Corvette Stingray Concept: Sideswipe In Disguise

Submitted by Rich C

You saw it here first. Now the Corvette Stingray Concept's finally official, uncovered as Sideswipe here in Chicago ahead of a starring role in Transformers: Revenge Of The Fallen. Gallery below.

It just seemed weird, considering GM's level of involvement in Transformers, for them not to have a Corvette in the movie. Now, here it is. It's not the next Corvette, but it is what we wish the next Corvette would look like — it's the Stingray Corvette Concept, and it'll play the character of Sideswipe. Frankly, it was gorgeous when we first saw it at GM's design center and it's even more gorgeous now.

We'll have more on the rest of the Autobots revealed here in Chicago shortly, but we kinda figured you'd want to see this silver gleaming slab of beautiful first.

Chevrolet to Produce Corvette 427 Convertible

Submitted by Dave E

Chevrolet on Thursday, Jan 12th unveiled the 2013 Corvette 427 Convertible Collector Edition - the fastest, more capable convertible in Corvette's history - as well as a 60th Anniversary Package that will be available on all 2013 Corvette models.

"The 2013 model year will be historic for Corvette, marking its 60th anniversary and the final year for the current 'C6' generation," said Chris Perry, vice president, Global Marketing and Strategy for Chevrolet.

This Corvette has a 427ci LS7 engine from the Z06, rating at 505hp. It is the most powerful engine ever installed in a production Corvette convertible and is only available with a six-speed manual transmission. The 427 Convertible also features several carbon-fiber components that help reduce weight, including carbon fiber raised hood, Z06-style fenders, floor panels and optional front splitter and rocker panels.

On Saturday, January 21, 2012, around 4PM EST, the first 427 Convertible in the 60th Anniversary Appearance Package was offered for sale at the Barrett-Jackson collector car auction in Scottsdale, AZ with live nationwide coverage on SPEED TV. It sold for $600,000.

R.V. Club Anyone?

Tire Pressure Monitor- Submitted by Dave E

Tire-pressure-monitoring-systems (TPMS) have been required on new cars and light trucks in the US since 2008 and are mandatory in Europe beginning this year. The introduction of TPMS has been somewhat awkward with sensors and software not only differing between car brands (Chevrolet, Toyota, etc.) but also sometimes between car models of the same brand. Here are tips for understanding TPMS.

How TPMS Works: Most systems use sensors mounted at the base of the wheels' valve stems. The sensor sends tire pressure and temperature data to the car's computer via radio frequency signals. The sensor or separate "initiators" near the wheels tell the computer(s) which wheel the signal is coming from. Most sensors simply mount with a nut and screw. Some systems hold the sensors to the wheel with bands similar to giant hose clamps.

If tire pressure is too low then the computer activates a warning light on the vehicle's dash. "Too low" is typically defined as tire pressure that is 25% low. Tires under-inflated by less than 25% adversely impact handling, braking, tire wear and gas mileage. You can still need to regularly use a tire pressure gauge or the display in your dash to check tire air pressure rather than ignoring the tires until the TPMS warning light comes on.

TPMS Repair: TPMS sensor batteries usually go dead after five to seven years and then the entire sensor must be replaced. Sensors might need to be replaced sooner in areas with salt on the roads. Nickel-plated rather than brass valve cores are best at resisting corrosion. On some cars just the corroded sensor valve can be replaced rather than the entire sensor.

The shoe on tire mounting/dismounting tools can damage sensors if it is inserted at the valve stem. In some harsh environments the sensor's rubber seal can degrade and start leaking air. Corvette owners should just expect the sensors to need to be completely replaced during their vehicle's second or third tire change. The sensors are usually easy to install on the wheel, but it is not a job for most do-it-yourselfers since the sensor is on the wheel inside the tire. Tire mounting/dismounting and balancing tools are needed. After the new sensors are installed, the car's software must go through a "relearn" procedure to recognize the new sensors. With some cars that relearn procedure is as simple as getting in the car and going for a drive and other cars require more complicated rituals and scan tools. Check your owner's manual to make sure.

Even if a repair shop installs the sensors for you, it is a good idea to research your specific vehicle's TPMS using the repair manual and owner's manual so you have a feel for how involved or simple the installation and "relearn" procedure is. New TPMS sensors can easily add $200+ to the cost of that second or third tire change.
